Post Op Instructions on Bracket Placement.

Congratulations on your decision to proceed with orthodontic treatment and taking the first step towards a new smile!

There will be challenges along the way, however we hope the benefits of a pleasing smile and healthy bite in the end will make it all worthwhile. To ensure your treatment proceeds as smoothly as possible, we have prepared the following to help you.

- The first week or so will be the toughest part of treatment as there are a number of things you will be dealing with and getting used to. The teeth will become tender as they begin to move. Many people find this initial movement the most uncomfortable part of the entire treatment; it will get easier as treatment progresses. A soft diet and the use of over the counter pain medication will assist you through this time.
- Your lips are adapting to the feel of the brackets. They will toughen up in time, much like your feet do after running around barefoot. If sores develop, use the wax to help with this transition.
- Some people find their speech is affected. This lasts briefly and can be quickly overcome by reading out loud to you. You may also find that there is more saliva in your mouth than normal. Again, as your body adapts to the braces, this will return to normal.
- Wear your elastics when and as directed to help speed the treatment.
- Avoid hard and sticky foods, which may damage or knock off the braces. Avoid cold food as they weaken the bond strength of the brackets to the teeth. Especially for the first 48 hours.
- Brush and floss regularly. Use a fluoride mouth rinse.
- Have your teeth cleaned and examined regularly during treatment
- Call the office if anything comes off during treatment so we can schedule more time at your next orthodontic visit. Otherwise we may not be able to re-cement the bracket at that appointment and treatment is delayed. Save any pieces and bring them to the appointment. Use the wax as necessary if there are sore spots. If a wire comes out, and the wax is not of any help, it can be cut with fingernail clippers if you are in a pinch. Be careful not to swallow the small cut off piece.
- Pre book your following appointment(s) when you leave the office to ensure you are seen as close to the recommended time as possible.. If you have any other questions or concerns, please don't hesitate to contact us.
